"People At Home Forgotten" -- Editor Says of Englebright

Although Sacramento is not in the Second Congressional District, C. J. Lilley, editor of The Sacramento Union, commented as follows concerning the race:

"Not any too certain that he will go back to congress must be Harry Englebright of the second congressional district which embraces Siskiyou, Modoc, Trinity, Shasta, Lassen, Tehama, Plumas, Sierra, Nevada, El Dodaro, Amador, Inyo, Calaveras, Alpine, Tuolumne, Mariposa and Mono counties. In this farflung and sparsely-settled territory Englebright has long been a kingpin. Back in Washington he has risen to Republican whip in the house, which is important in the nation's capitol if it doesn't bring any groceries to the widely scattered voters in his district.

"Somewhere along the line Englebright has crossed with his constituents and we hear rumblings of dissatisfaction concerning him and his policies. This can't be the usual game of opposing the congressman who was an out-spoken isolationist before the war. It seems to go more deeply than that. Maybe Englebright has been too big a shot in Washington and paid too little attention to the clamor from the people back home. Anyway Rudolph R. Henderson, Lone Pine building materials dealer and a Republican, is going after Englebright, as is Frank G. Finnegan, Democrat and attorney of Nevada City. A woman is also in the race, Gertrude V. Clark, of Sutter Creek. She's a Democrat, too. Time magazine takes note of the Henderson campaign, but Time is pushing around many an office-holder who clung too long to his isolationist policies.

"The Sacramento Union attempted to interest Englebright in the Indian burial ground outside Auburn and finally got a reply out of the congressman after a couple of letters and a sharp editorial. Not that Englebright helped the Indians, except by putting in a bill he knew had little hope of passage. Along came Bing Crosby from Hollywood and bought the ground for the Indians, thereby saving Englebright further embarrassment. We wondered in that instance if Englebright wasn't slowing down and becoming a bit high-hat."

Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L. JR.

Citizens whose palms are calloused from manual work and others who have at some time in the past, labored at hard physical jobs, will heartily approve of the government's recommendation that all war workers spend not more than forty eight hours per week,, or six eight hour days at their jobs.

Everyone who has toiled and sweated knows how welcome "quittin' time" is, and every laborer and foreman knows that the pace of work slows a bit even towards the end of an eight hour day. Fatigue thrives on long hours. It thrives on a seven day week for individuals. Fatigue breeds carelessness, and it even makes the hand slip and the muscles falter.

Other work condition ceilings approved by government war agencies are: one day of rest out of seven for every worker; a 30 minute meal period; vacations, preferably broken up into several short vacations.

These recommendations have been made by the federal agencies in the face of various labor shortages. Since this is so, it is obvious that plan is not conceived for the purpose of pampering or delight well paid workers. It is made because every human being is, in at least one sense, a machine. And even a mechanical machine, a cold thing of steel and iron, needs good care.

The human machine doesn't need oiling, or sharpening, or gear-grinding, of course, but it does have other needs just as definite. Three meals a day, eight hours sleep, rest at least one day of seven, and a maximum work week of six eight hour days are the bare physical requirements of the human machine.

The experience of production managers has shown that when these rules are violated, the loss is greater than gains made by lengthening the working hours. Speed is decreased—mistakes are increased, and health is strained to the point where production losses, through worker-absences multiply.

These seemingly easy maximums approved by the government will undoubtedly have the effect, not of decreasing, but of increasing our war production. Naturally, it is to that end that all of our manpower and resources on the home front are being bent. Naturally that is the aim in mind which the war program planners of the WPB and other agencies had in mind.

The approval of hour ceilings and scheduled rest and vacation periods are merely steps to take adequate care of the human machine. A human being is a lot more than a machine, at least, in the free countries, but the physical man demands as regular and benevolent care as the most complex machine.

Upon the productive capacity of millions of individuals depends whether or not our nation can produce war weapons with sufficient speed and sufficient quantity to beat our enemies. Winning is not as simple as that, of course, but the total amount of weapons produced will depend greatly upon the proper working schedule for our war workers. Thus the general public can join with the horny-handed workers in justified gratitude for the wisdom of government executives in inaugurating an excellent policy on work hours.

ELKS TO MEET GRASS VALLEY FIREMEN TEAM

The Nevada City Elks will endeavor to hold at least a tie for top spot in the softball league tomorrow night when they tangle with the Grass Valley Firemen at Memorial Park in Grass Valley.

Last Friday night fate played a trick on the Nevada City softballers, They were defeated by the DeMolays by the score of 8 to 3 and it happened that a former Elks player, Marvin Haddy, played a leading role in the defeat of the local softball ten.

Haddy quit the Nevada City team and was immediately signed to catch for the DeHolays. His playing and hitting combined with Royce Eldredge's pitching, was responsible for the DeMolay victory.

Ike Hoskin, who previously pitched three nice games for Nevada City, proved no mystery for the lads in the Valley. He was touched for eleven hits. Steger with two blows was the leading hitter for the Elks.

Short score	R.	H.	E.
Nevada City	3	4	4
Grass Valley	8	11	2

Batteries: Hoskins, Frantz and Childers; Eldredge and Haddy.

It Used to be That Way

By EDW. C. UREN

I had a wonderful dream the other night. It had been one of those hot, sticky days that we get just a few of occasionally, and as soon as the fire got out of the sheets I hit the hay.

I dreamt it was Saturday night. I had taken my regular weekly bath—and don't infer that it was the only one for the week — but Saturdays we washed behind our ears and made a better job of it. As I was saying, I came up the street feeling fresh as a daisy and headed for Joe Halligans, on the corner of Pine and Commercial Streets.

Joe made a practice of cooking up either a good Irish stew, clam chowder, or a pot of beans every Saturday. I could hear Joe's hearty laugh long before I reached the door and as I entered I saw that several of my old cronies were there, and Joe says "Get a stool boy and sit up; the stew's fine tonight."

So we sat there and kidded one another and discussed the latest scandal, like we always did, while we washed down Joe's savory dish with a good, ice cold schooner of lager, drawn fresh and sparkling fro mthe keg; and, boy after you had had a helping or two of stew and got a couple of schooners under your belt you felt at peace with all the world.

Those were the days when we didn't have to worry about our gas buggy to go 20 or 30 miles to a dance, nor we didn't have much in the way of picture shows, but if we felt like it we paid ten cents to see one.

It's got so now a'days that they've forgotten how to serve a good glass of beer, and as for stew or beans, they'd have a stroke if you suggested it.

After a fellow has worked all day in this gol darn heat and the only cooling thing he has seen is the girls going by without any clothes to speak of, by the time the whistle blows, he's so thoroughly dehydrated that he feels like a Prohibitionist's conscience. He goes into one of these drink emporiums with his tongue hanging out and some chap serves him a six ounce glass of luke warm suds with two inches of foam on it. When he tosses it down it just sizzles a little and evaporates before it gets where it can do any good.

If Tony Rore is as good as his word and succeeds in getting the City Council to put in that ice water fountain on Broad Street I'm going to see that his statue is unveiled down on the Plaze.

"FIDDLING WHILE ROME BURNS"

While "Rome burns" on many far-flung battle-fronts and little encouraging war news filters in through the censors, masters of political strategy "fiddle" with fugitive "wage stabilization" and "price ceilings."

On the home front furor rages over the inflation spectre which hangs over the cost of the war, our standard of living, and the ultimate value of the billions we are pouring into war bonds. "Inflation must be curbed at all costs," says these captains of expediency; "everything possible must be done to remove its causes or control its growth." But what actually has been done to control inflation? What specific steps have been taken to prevent it?

Mr. Henderson's diluted OPA has been given a dull weapon indeed with which to clamp down price lids and police them. Wages, a major factor in price determination, are still on the loose under will-o'-the-wisp stabilization."

Mr. Davis' pro-labor WLB wage decisions, always up and under the new cost-of-living formula so continuing on a broad and expansive scale, now open up the whole inflation phantasmagoria to the "me-too" wage-grab contingent.

Thus we have two emergency war agencies, the OPA and the WLB, set up to control prices and speed war production, respectively, toothless and indigent in the performance of their prescribed tasks. They have, thus far, not only failed of their purposes but actually obstructed the performance thereof. And why? Because neither has the power or the weight that such vital issues require in an emergency such as we face.

The obvious and crying need is for a definite national labor policy, one upon which both labor and management can hang their hats, one upon wrich wages and therefore costs can be based. For until wages are known costs cannot be determined. Until costs are determneid prices cannot be properly set. Until prices are properly set they cannot be controlled. And until prices are controlled inflation cannot be prevented.

The American people want to win this war and the peace which will follow it. They are ready to do everything within reason and to make all the necessary sacrifices to win it. Small wonder than that they are becoming restive under the faltering, indecisive policies exhibited on wage freezing so necessary in preventing inflation. Small wonder that they are fed up with political "fiddling" on the home front while "Rome burns" on the land, in the air and on the sea.

OUR SECRET WEAPON

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Committee exercised his flair for the dramatic when he hit the headlines by announcing that $30,000,000 has been allocated the Navy for "a kind of secret training and a kind of secret weapon."

"Secret weapons" are thrilling to the imagination. But no war has been won by any such marvel since the Greeks reduced Troy by hiding soldiers in a mammoth wooden horse, to emerge after the curious Trojans dragged the horse within their impregnable walls. Hitler, a devilish psychologist, has prated of secret weapons since this war began. But all of his victories have been won by skilled employment in overwhelming force of weapons as familiar to his enemies as to himself.

So it has been with successes of America and her allies. The secret weapon of Britain in repelling invasion in the terrible autumn of 1940 was simply the matchless valor and prowess of the Royal Air Force. The Secret Weapon of the American people has been the startlingly swift change of an easy-going people of dissenting viewpoints into an angry, united, capable people going all out for victory with all they possess. The Secret Weapon of the Russian people and of the Chinese people has been love of country intense beyond the comprehension of butcher dictators and their slave countrymen.

It is to be hoped, of course, that the secret weapon Congressman Vinson speaks of will prove of high military value—but the weapon that will crush the Axis is the unconquerable zeal of democratic peoples for the freedom they value above security and above life.

THE BLOOD OF THE PEOPLE

American casualties reported in this war so far are mercifully small, in view of the number of men engaged and the scope of operations: 4801 dead, 3218 wounded, 36,124 missing.

As the war goes on, the casualty toll must grow. That is part of the price of victory. But the list of dead will be the shorter because the people at home are shedding their blood, by millions of pints, so that fighting men in field hospitals and civilians in possible disaster areas may have lifesaving transfusions.

This week is Blood Donner Week in districts where there are blood banks. Healthy men and women are asked to donate a pint of the fluid of life. There is no risk, no pain, no after effect. Physicians are on hand to test volunteers and make sure that no person who might possibly be harmed by losing blood is accepted as a donor.

Thus the blood of the people of America will flow on every battle-front of this war, to hasten victory and to hold to the minimum the sacrifice of life of the boys on those battle-fronts.

NEWS IN RHYME

Over KJBS Daily at 12:30 p. m.
Written by Harley M. Leete, Jr.

Already we save rubber and tin,
Now wasting grease becomes a sin.
For glycerin's used for bomb and shell,
And grease is a source, if husbanded well.
There's a glycerin shortage, very severe.
And that makes waste grease very dear,
For ten per cent of grease and fat,
Is glycerin, and that is that.
So housewives, scrape that greasy pan;
You'll lend a hand to a fighting man.
Two billion pounds of waste fats go,
Into the ash can—this we know.
Or else they go down the kitchen drain,
So later, you struggle with hight and main,
For lo! the drain proceeds to choke,
And on you is played a greasy joke.
Housewives! Duty's plain and clear,
Gather your grease from far and near,
Put it into a metal can,
And take it down to your butcher man.
Butcher collects your fats at cost:
Let's see no glycerin wantonly lost.
The grease you give will slap a Jap,
Or give a Hun an awful rap.
Glycerin makes our bombs explode,
Helps send artillery's lethal load.
The shortage occurred since we were supplied,
From imports which dwindled and finally died.
Come, housewives; Help us do this job,
And save each fat and greasy blob.
We'll grease the skids for Axis bands,
With the help of housewives willing hands.
"Grease for Victory's" an urgent must:
We'll reach our greasy goal or bust!

Porcupines Find Salt In Alleghany Cedar Poles

A shipment of cedar poles was placed in the Alleghany power line two years ago, according to Ranger F. W. Meggers of the Tahoe National Forest. This year the porcupines are satisfying their craving for salt by eating off the softer or outer shell clear to the top of the thirty foot poles. One was eloctrocuted at Buhl ranch. However no fire was started, since there is a clearing ten feet in diameter around each pole. Tin guards are now being placed on many poles to prevent further damage.

Upon investigation, it was learned that these poles were rafted down from the state of Washington, hence their salt content.

CARELESSLY TOSSED CIGARETTES, MATCHES CHIEF CAUSE OF FIRES

Over ninety per cent of the forest fires starting in the Tahoe area have been traced to carelessly tossed cigarettes or matches, states Fire Chief Marc Edmonds of the Tahoe National Forest. This high percentage of smoker fires are of great concern to forest officers and as a result an appeal to the public has been made urging the use of ash trays in cars and to smoke only at designated stations within the forest. But according to Edmonds, cigarettes are still being carelessly tossed with resulting fires. Judge Charles Morehouse of Grass Valley in fining a motorist $50 recently for heedlessly throwing a lighted cigarette in a highly inflammable area stated, "the rural communities and moutain areas of California are facing a grave situation. The very dry season with its usual danger of man caused fires and threat of enemy action make it immerative that all citizens make every effort to prevent fires. Judge Morehouse stated that persons found guilty of violating the fire laws in his court could not expect any sympathy unless the violations were commited under extenuating circumstances.

Inspector Harvey Blackwell and his staff of officers with the California Highway Patrol in this area have pledged their wholehearted cooperation in the apprehension of the careless cigarette flipper. Blackwell recently inteviewed by forest officers at Lake Tahoe stated, "my men have all been instructed to make arrests in all cases where persons endanger the forest by the careless throwing of ignited tobacco and matches from motor xehicles on California highways."

Supervisor Guerdon Ellis of the Tahoe forest is of the opinion that if the general public were fully aware of the existing forest fire danger it would go a long way toward clearing up the careless smoker problem.

Assistant Regional Forester Paul P. Pitchlynn of San Francisco is a forest service visitor in Nevada City this week. ARMY WILL GIVE SUPPORT TO AIRCRAFT WARNING OBSERVERS

Each Chief Observer of ground observation posts of the Aircraft Warning Service received a letter from Brigadier General W. E. Pepner commanding the IV Fighter Command, explaining the plans for additional army support to ground observation posts.

"The Fighter Command," General Kepner said, "is now in a position to provide centralized and controlled transportation for ground observers from their homes to the observation post and return where commercial transportation is not available and where the distance to be traveled requires some form of transportation. Details are also being worked out on a plan whereby this command will assume the expense of installation ond the monthly rental charge for telephones used exclusively for reporting of flash messages."

This was welcome news to most chief observers who have faced an increasingly difficult problem in providing transportation for observers, particularly at the outlying points where many of the observation posts are, of necessity, located. Observers have been scanning the skies twenty four hours a day, day in and day out since Pearl Harbar, in order that no airplane might enter any part of the Pacific coastal area without being reported to the IV Fighter Command. The task was imposed upon these observation posts suddenly and there have been many problems presented which were not possible of solution immediately. Without these posts the Pacific Coast could not have considered itself prepared for air attack and not only the chief observers but all citizens will beneit by the increased support now made available by the IV Fighter Command.

General Kepner pointed out that the assumption by his Command of certain expenses of operation of the ground observation posts does not relieve the local community, the county or the state civilian defense agencies of their responsibility for meeting other expenses nor does it in any way relieve them of the responsibility for recruiting volunteers for these posts. The ground observation corps, which is an essential part of the Aircraft Warning Service, is important to all civilian defense since without the aircraft warning service local communities could not be warned of the approach of enemy aircraft and would not be in a position to take the passive defense measures for which such communities are organized. There devolves upon these communities, therefore, the responsibility to assist the ground observation posts and where a community or county is no able to do this the State Council of Defense has indicated its willingness to assist them.

General Kepner said, "in providing for the more urgent requirements pertaining to maintenace of the ground observation corps it will be essential that this command have direct control of the corps." This is understood to mean that the army will exercise direct supervision over the corps through civilian supervisors appointed by the command in each county and in districts within a county. The county director will remain in charge of the posts in his county. The state directors in each one of the three states on the Pacific Coast will serve as liaison officers with the IV Fighter Command.

General Kepner indicated his command was deeply indebted to the state and county representatives for the assistance they had given the command since Pearl Harbor. He also expressed thanks to all observers and chief observers for their loyalty and devotion to the ground observation corps. Without these patriotic citizens, who serve with little recognition from the community at large, it would not now be possible for the IV Fighter Command to perform its mission of defending the Pacific Coast from enemy attack by air.

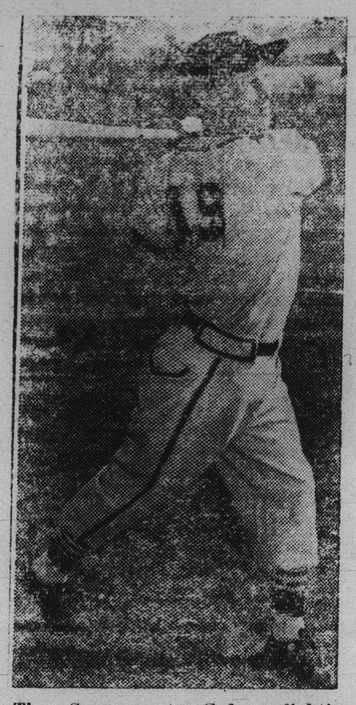
OUT OF SACRAMENTO LINEUP AGAIN



The Sacramento Solons, fighting for the lead in the Pacific Coast League with the Los Angeles Angels, were further "jinxed" Tuesday night when Gene Handley, one of the Sacramento leading hitters was injured and will be out of the lineup indefinitely. Handley had pust returned to the lineup recently after a several weeks absence due to a leg injury.

WARREN WINS ROUND ONE IN GOVERNOR BOUT

By CLEM WHITAKER

The gubernatorial battle has reached the slugging stage—and Attorney General Earl Warren, with his blasting attack on Governor Olson's spending proclivities, has won Round One, according to the experts at ringside.

Mr. Warren, non-partisan challenger for the gubernatorial title, flattened the Olson claims to having built up a state treasury surplus in his first major attack of the campaign and left the governor's crown badly askew.

Charged Mr. Warren:

"California has achieved a measure of solvency in state government, despite Governor Olson, not because of him, and the credit belongs to the members of the legislature who refused to approve his exorbitant demands for appropriations.

"Let's get the record straight. The Olson administration has been guilty of the most profligate waste and misuse of public funds in the state's history. If Governor Olson had had his way, there would be no surplus in the state treasury, instead there would be a staggering deficit and the people of California would be carrying much heavier tax load than is now imposed upon them."

Then, giving credit where credit is due, Attorney General Warren asserted:

"The credit for the present surplus belongs to the courageous members of the state legislature, both Democrats and Republicans, who fought Governor Olson to a standstill, despite every conceivable type of political pressure, and who reduced his prodigal demands for funds by more than $125,000,000. It was these same splendid legislators who defeated Governor Olson's demands for more than $75,000,000 in new taxes. And it is these same legislators whom Governor Olson is now trying desperately to 'purge'."

Mr. Warren's statement is of more than passing significance. It means that he has definitely cast his lot with that of the economy bloc legislators who have carried the battle against Governor Olson's unprecedented budget demands for the past four years. It means, too, without doubt, that Mr. Warren will shortly announce a program for sweeping reductions in the cost of government—and reductions in state taxes, designed to aid the people in meeting greatly increased federal taxes for war purposes. And politically, it undoubtedly means that every member of the economy bloc in the legislature will be out legging it for Mr. Warren, just as Warren is battling for them.

This much is certain. Round One, which Mr. Warren took with hardly a counter punch from Olson, is just a warm-up for the rounds to follow. From now until primary electeion day on August 25, the boys will be in there slugging!
